In 2007, The Dauns began construction on what was a family basement recreation room into a German Rathskeller. The acoustical suspended ceiling was replaced with a tin ceiling. The carpeting was replaced with wood and tile flooring. The toy closet soon became a pantry and the children's play area a bar.

The "basement rec room" had always been the area the family spent time together. Now that both their girls were going to college, the Dauns wanted a comfortable area to spend time with friends as well as family. The project took a little over a year to complete but is exactly the way they envisioned the Rathskeller to be.

In addition to the Rathskeller, the project also included remodeling the ¾ bathroom and the office area with custom cabinetry.
